M: Let's talk about the newsletter.

W: OK, let's check what we've got so far. We've decided to have one main story and one short story, right?

M: Right. And what about pictures? Should we have one for each story?

W: I'm not so sure about that. Maybe it would be too much. How about just for the main story?

M: That sounds good. Now, what will our stories be? We could do one about the students who visited from Hawaii. Maybe we could use one of the photos they sent us.

W: What are you working on?

M: My presentation for next week.

W: Oh, it's about the London Paralympics.

M: Yeah. I made this chart showing the number of participants from each country and the number of medals they won. Great Britain had 294 athletes and won 120 medals.

W: Wow! How about countries with fewer athletes?

M: Well, Japan and Spain sent just over 130 athletes --- Japan won 16 medals, and Spain, 42.

W: Spain and France had similar results, but France won three more medals.

M: Right. I'm surprised about Ukraine though. They sent only 17 more participants than Spain, but they won twice as many medals.

W: Interesting. France and Germany had almost the same number of athletes, but they didn't do as well as Ukraine.

M: Well, Germany did better than France.

W: Wow! They won 152 medals!

M: 152?

W: Oh, sorry. That's the number of participants. They got 66.

Question No. 20

In some countries, silver gifts are given for 25th wedding anniversaries and gold gifts for 50th anniversaries. But in the United Kingdom, there are also some traditional gifts given to celebrate other anniversaries. Perhaps people are not so familiar with them. For example, for 3rd anniversaries, leather gifts are usually given. Three years later, gifts containing sugar are appropriate. Six years after that, something made of silk is the expected gift. Some might be surprised to find out that diamonds are given not only for engagements, but also for 60th anniversaries.

Question No. 21

Welcome to The Ocean Hotel. Our rooms are decorated in traditional French style, but you can use the latest technology, for example, wireless Internet. Every room offers a splendid ocean view, so you can see the sunset. Our hotel has Chinese, Japanese, and Italian restaurants on the top floor and three coffee shops on the first and second floors, so you can enjoy Asian and Western dishes. In front of the hotel we have an outdoor swimming pool next to the beach, and you can also enjoy an indoor swimming pool and an exercise room.

Question No. 22

Palau is a country in the Pacific. It became an independent republic on October 1, 1994. Palau's flag is similar to Japan's because it features a single circle. However, the circle is yellow, and the background is blue. Blue is used to represent the ocean, which the nation depends on for food. Unlike the Japanese flag, the circle on Palau's flag is a little off-center. Instead of the sun, as on the Japanese flag, the circle represents the moon, which is traditionally thought to be important in the life cycle and customs of the people.

Questions No. 23 to 25

Helen Keller, admired for her work on behalf of people with disabilities, visited Japan three times. She was unable to see or hear, but she was impressed with the kindness of the Japanese people and developed an appreciation of Japan and its culture.

She first came to Japan in 1937, when she was invited by the Japanese government to make a lecture tour throughout the country. While she was here, she was moved by the story about the faithful Akita dog, Hachiko, and wondered if she could have such a dog. Ichiro Ogasawara, a police officer in Akita City, kindly gave her one of his own puppies. She named this dog Kami.

She took Kami home with her, which made Kami the first Akita dog to go to the United States. In a letter to a friend, she called Kami an "angel in fur" and said that he was especially gentle and devoted. She loved this dog so much that she asked for another Akita dog, which was sent to her in 1939. This dog was Kami's brother, and she called him Go-Go. Helen Keller's dogs received a lot of attention in the United States, which helped to introduce Akita dogs as popular pets for Americans.
